MESSAGE FROM THE CHAMPLIN FOUNDATION

To say that 2020 was a challenging year is perhaps the ultimate understatement. Thousands of Rhode Islanders lost loved ones, unable to hold their hands to say goodbye. Businesses closed and livelihoods were lost, pushing many into economic despair. Students experienced devastating learning loss. Racial inequities were strikingly exposed, as was the profound prejudice and bigotry that centuries of systemic racism have wrought.

But there were also moments of hope, caring, and courage – victories, small and large, in the face of unimaginable challenges.

If 2019 was a year of tradition and transformation, as we wrote in last year's Annual Report, then 2020 was a year of resilience. Time and again, we heard stories of resilience from Rhode Island's remarkable non-profit community. The Foundation distributed $20 million in 2020, in three different cycles, to 223 organizations, and those charities deployed funds in ways that balanced immediate needs against long-term priorities, providing significant and lasting impact to our communities.

Consider the story of Omar Bah and the Refugee Dream Center. Like so many organizations, our team at Champlin was new to video conferencing. When the pandemic forced us to close our office, we had our doubts that remote site visits could replace the connection and understanding we gathered from in-person tours and conversations. Omar and his Board proved us wrong, making a compelling case (virtually!) and illustrating the importance – and timeliness – of expanding supports for the state's refugee community.

Or the stories of healthcare providers, from the Rhode Island Free Clinic in Providence to WellOne in Pascoag and everywhere in between, working to fight the spread of COVID while simultaneously addressing mental and behavioral health stressors, expanding access to healthcare, and working to close persistent equity gaps in health outcomes.

And stories like those of Southside Cultural Center, Youth in Action, Wilbury Theatre, Frosty Drew Observatory and so many others who found ways to spread joy, build connection, and foster understanding when it was in short supply.

In 2020, perhaps more than ever, these accounts and so many others inspired us.

We want to acknowledge the commitment and flexibility of the Foundation's Distribution Committee. At the end of 2020, R. Kelly Sheridan stepped down as Distribution Committee Chair after three years. Kelly's steady hand and counsel guided the Foundation through its most consequential changes in 20 years, including the search for a new Executive Director, the embrace of new grantmaking technology, the addition of new voices to the Distribution Committee, and our pandemic response. Champlin is now more responsive, more transparent and more diverse thanks to his leadership, and we're so glad to have his continued insight as a member of the Distribution Committee.

We also welcomed two new members to the Distribution Committee: The Honorable Edward C. Clifton, a retired Associate Justice from the Rhode Island Superior Court and a former Distinguished Jurist in Residence faculty member at Roger Williams University School of Law; and Susan Follett Lusi, PhD., the former Superintendent of Providence Public Schools and current President and CEO of Mass Insight.

The Champlin Foundation started with a 12-year-old boy who ran away from home with no money in his pocket. He would go on with his son and grandson to build an impressive enterprise, the S.B. Champlin and Son Company, the success of which our community still benefits from today. They established our proud tradition of quietly and steadfastly helping those who do good do more. If this year has taught us anything, it's that Rhode Island's non-profit community does tremendous good – immeasurable good – even during the most difficult circumstances. We know they will continue to do more, inspire more, and serve more. And as we look forward to 2021 – what we hope will be a year of renewal – we will continue to proudly stand by their side.

Arts & Culture

Teatro ECASThe Steel YardOcean State Pops Orchestra

The COVID-19 pandemic was devastating for many arts organizations. Performances were cancelled, theaters shuttered, and galleries left dark. But like the talented artists they work with, these organizations are nimble and creative, and found new ways to entertain and inspire audiences, like The Wilbury Theatre Group's efforts to bring performances outdoors.

At a time when we were forced to maintain our distance physically, many organizations in this category identified opportunities to strengthen our connections to one another. Stages of Freedom is building community by creating programming about Black life and culture, and the Southside Cultural Center of Rhode Island is enhancing its performance and meeting spaces for multicultural groups. Both are first-time grantees and join a group of 25 first-time funded organizations across all areas of focus from North Smithfield to North Kingstown. As our state begins the hard work of recovering and rebuilding from COVID, arts and cultural organizations will be an essential contributor to our ability to process our losses while at the same time being a source of joy, connection, and comfort.

Conservation & Parks

Save the BayRhode Island Farm IncubatorAquidneck Land Trust

The Rhode Island Zoological Society has been a beneficiary of Champlin support since 1966, and our 54-year relationship continues to bring a love of wild animals and an understanding of conservation to Rhode Island children and families. At the same time, South Providence based conservation organization Southside Community Land Trust will support local farmers and simultaneously help to eliminate food deserts by making fresh food available from its new Farm to Market Center.

The Nature Conservancy, The Newport Tree Conservancy, and Aquidneck Land Trust will each improve outdoor spaces. The Nature Conservancy will launch a robust tree planting program in urban neighborhoods in partnership with the City of Providence. The Newport Tree Conservancy will care for trees in the City's North End, and in Middletown, the Aquidneck Land Trust will enhance community usage at Spruce Acres Farm with a public pavilion.

Education

Frosty Drew Observatory and Nature Center

College Unbound

DownCity Design

Education is the great equalizer – it opens opportunities and fosters the conditions by which students of all ages can succeed. Champlin grantees in this category, both established and first-time funding recipients, share as part of their critical missions a desire to create opportunity for personal, professional, and economic growth.

College Unbound, for example, will use Champlin funds to invest in technology and create mobile classrooms that engage and empower adult learners. DownCity Design will make improvements to their new headquarters, providing a space for learning and connection for K-12 students – the next generation of problem-solvers and leaders in our communities. And at the other end of the state, at the Frosty Drew Observatory in Charlestown, a replacement telescope has been described by the team there as a “once-in-a-lifetime” investment into their noble work of building greater understanding for and appreciation of the natural world.

Healthcare

HopeHealth Hospice & Palliative Care

South County Health

Newport Mental Health

The COVID-19 pandemic presented our state with the most significant public health crisis in a century, and healthcare professionals in our hospitals, community health centers, and behavioral health organizations met the crisis head on. More than 20 percent of Champlin funding went to healthcare in 2020, including to frontline organizations serving vulnerable, at-risk populations.

Champlin's grants cover everything from groundbreaking Alzheimer's research at Butler Hospital to pediatric mental health services at Bradley Hospital. Champlin made investments this year in improving telehealth infrastructure, and continues to invest in community-based services, like the critical work being done at Thundermist with its new dental clinic in West Warwick and Newport Mental Health's expanding office space.

Historic Preservation

Pettaquamscutt Historical SocietySmith's CastleRhode Island Historical Society

Statewide, Champlin helps preserve some of the state's most iconic, historic, and culturally significant structures. Landmarks like Trinity Church in Newport and the nearby Fort Adams, and the First Baptist Church in America – the Charitable Baptist Society in Providence. In considering requests in this competitive category, we looked not only at the historical and architectural importance of the building, but also how these organizations reach out to serve the broader community.

We were also pleased to support essential safety upgrades for the Mount Hope Trust in Bristol and support Block Island's Southeast Lighthouse, a first-time grantee and a Rhode Island treasure. Both sites are registered as national historic landmarks.

Libraries

Providence Public Library

Pascoag Public Library

Library patrons in communities around the state will find more welcoming, modern, and creative spaces as leaders look to make exciting, 21st century improvements. Despite many libraries facing widespread, long-term closures due to the pandemic – closures that coincided with our application period – public libraries submitted innovative and user-centered proposals.

The two largest library grant recipients this year were the Jamestown Philomenian Library, which is in the process of completely reimagining its facility, and the Memorial & Library Association in Westerly for much-needed HVAC upgrades. At Providence Public Library, this year's award brings the Foundation's 3-year investment total to $1.5 million, and at Pawtucket Public Library, grant funds will be used to help bring to fruition their vision for a dedicated teen space.

Social Services

*Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.
Community Center*

Refugee Dream Center

Higher Ground International

Champlin funded 44 social service organizations, addressing pressing needs from food insecurity and homelessness to violence against women. This group includes eight first-time grantees, such as the Refugee Dream Center, which is making renovations to its new offices to better connect with and serve refugees statewide. Another first-time recipient, We Share Hope, is adding new refrigeration, allowing them to continue to deliver food throughout a network of non-profits and offer food and other necessities at its Hope Market, open to under-resourced communities.

Grants to the Dr. Martin Luther King Jr Community Center in Newport and Crossroads Rhode Island will allow for capital improvements to their respective headquarters that support their mission-driven work to fight hunger, improve health, and expand access to affordable housing.

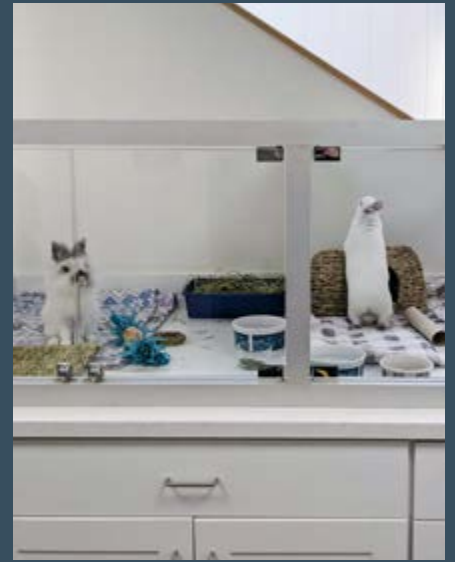

Welfare of Animals

Providence Animal Rescue League

The Heart of RI Animal Rescue League

Potter League

The three grantees in this category are tireless champions for animals, providing expert care for the rescues and advocating for meaningful policies to protect animals of all breeds and sizes. Each serves a large footprint, demonstrating significant impact across geographies and species. And at a time when many families are facing economic insecurity, the medical care needed for a pet can be a challenge.

Heart of Rhode Island Animal Rescue League continues to build out its new facility in Cranston to help meet these needs. Also prioritizing the health, safety, and long-term placement of animals is the Providence Animal Rescue League, as well as the Potter League for Animals, which is expanding its services with the acquisition of the Rhode Island Companion Alliance, a past recipient of Champlin funds.

Youth Services

Boys & Girls Club of Providence

Mother of Hope Camp

Smithfield YMCA

Young people across Rhode Island are facing increased anxiety, decreased access to education and support, and the same isolation that has proved challenging for Rhode Islanders of all ages. Our state has an incredible community of non-profit organizations deeply committed to tackling those challenges and putting kids first.

Over the course of more than 70 years, Mother of Hope Camp has provided hands-on learning and camaraderie in nature for thousands of children. And though many camps were forced to close last summer, Mother of Hope and the others we support found ways to provide traditional outdoor, multidisciplinary camp experiences. At Youth In Action, more than 200 young people are served each week in a supportive and inclusive setting where they can share their perspectives, enhance their leadership skills, and ultimately drive change in their communities.

COVID Response

Shelter Thermometers

Progreso Latino

Boys & Girls Club of Providence

The non-profit community met the immediate challenge of the pandemic head on, while continuing to fight for the causes that fuel their individual and collective missions.

Their resilience and strength are an inspiration, and The Champlin Foundation sought to help lighten the heavy loads they carry with additional support outside of our traditional grants cycle.

In March 2020, Champlin announced a $1.6 million, multi-faceted approach to support the state's response to the COVID-19 pandemic, starting with a $600,000 commitment to five non-profit hospitals to acquire testing and diagnostic machines to dramatically increase the number of COVID tests that could be completed daily. Another $13,000 went to purchase thermal scan thermometers for homeless shelters.

We heard consistently from non-profit leaders across sectors that sudden and unexpected loss of revenue – from childcare tuition, program fees, ticket sales, and more – was devastating to their organizations. While many charities were eligible for emergency grants through collaborative funds, many longtime Champlin grantees were not. With that in mind, another $1 million was allocated to an emergency Capital Liquidity Fund to offer some assistance to those unable to access other sources to help respond to the crisis.

We also recognized that, in many instances, flexibility and understanding was needed most. By extending the deadlines for grant applications and allowing some flexibility in repurposing previous grants, our grantees were better able to respond to the challenge that they faced and free up tens of thousands of dollars in the process. Additionally, grantees seemed to adapt well and appreciate the new online application – a critical streamlining improvement at a time when many organizations were overburdened and short-staffed.

Our state's non-profits have been called upon, time and again, to be nimble and creative. We worked hard to do the same this year. But at the end of the day – at the end of a year that we will not soon forget – it is their leadership and resilience that led by example.
